NO! HE DIED BEFORE HE COULD TALK! IT WAS THE PILOT OF OUR OBSERVATION-SEARCH PLANE WHO SPOTTED THE ROLLS-ROYCE IN BACK OF THE SHACK! IT WAS HIDDEN FROM THE ROAD BUT NOT FROM THE AIR! HE THOUGHT IT WAS STRANGE THAT SUCH AN EXPENSIVE TYPE CAR WAS PARKED NEXT TO SUCH A RUN-DOWN SHACK SO HE FLEW LOW AND INVESTIGATED! HE RECOGNIZED IT AS THE SAME ONE YOU WERE KIDNAPPED IN! THE REST WAS EASY...
OH, THEN THAT WAS THE LOW-FLYING PLANE WE HEARD!

the WEREWOLF'S CURSE!
THROUGHOUT THE AGES, WHEREVER MEN HAVE GATHERED, THEY HAVE SPOKEN OF NAMELESS TERRORS—OF EVIL MONSTERS THAT STRIKE SHUDDERING FEAR INTO THE HEARTS OF ALL WHO BEHOLD THEM! THE MOST LOATHSOME OF THESE CREATURES HAS ALWAYS BEEN THE WEREWOLF... HALF-MAN AND HALF-WOLF! WHEN TOM BRADY AND HIS SISTER BETH RETURN TO THEIR ANCESTRAL CASTLE ON THE DREARY MOORS OF NORTH SCOTLAND, THEY LEARN THAT ALL WEREWOLVES ARE NOT OF THE PAST!

AN ANCIENT KNOCKER THUMPS AGAINST AN OAK-PANELLED DOOR...
CL K!
CLANK!
NO ONE SEEMS TO BE IN THE CASTLE, TOM.
THERE MUST BE SOMEONE, BETH. I WIRED THE CARETAKER, MARLEY, THAT WE'D BE COMING UP, AND TO EXPECT US!
I'LL KNOCK AGAIN— WAIT! SOMEONE'S COMING!
EH— WHO'S KNOCKING? WHO'S THERE?
I'M TOM BRADY, MR. MARLEY, AND THIS IS MY SISTER BETH. THIS CASTLE WAS PART OF OUR FATHER'S ESTATE. WHEN HE DIED——IT WAS LEFT TO US IN HIS WILL.
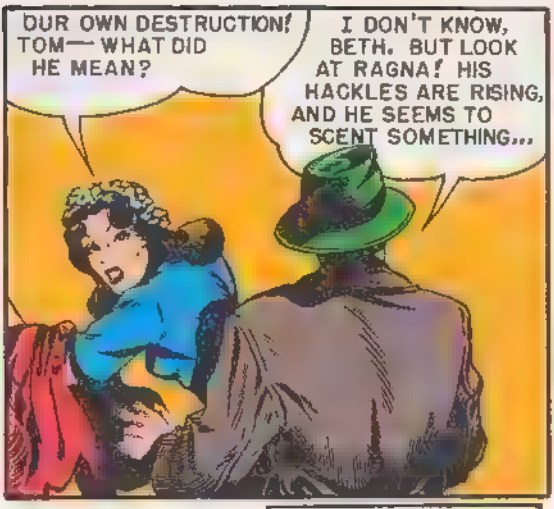
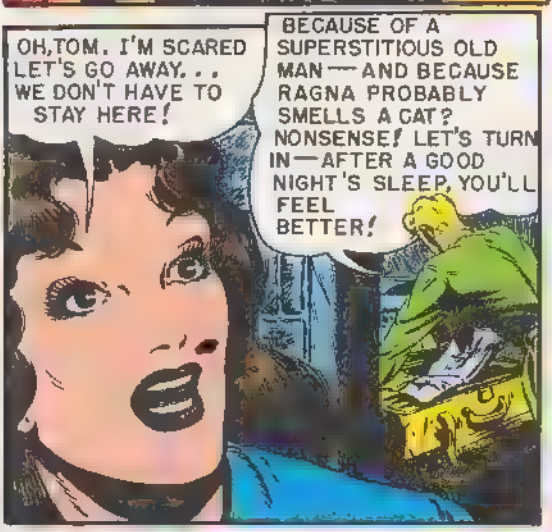
I SEE. COME IN, BRADY...
...BUT LET ME WARN YOU! FOR THE PAST TWO CENTURIES, BRADY CASTLE HAS BEEN CURSED FOR YOUR FAMILY. NO GOOD CAN COME OF YOUR BEING HERE...NOTHING BUT YOUR OWN DESTRUCTION!

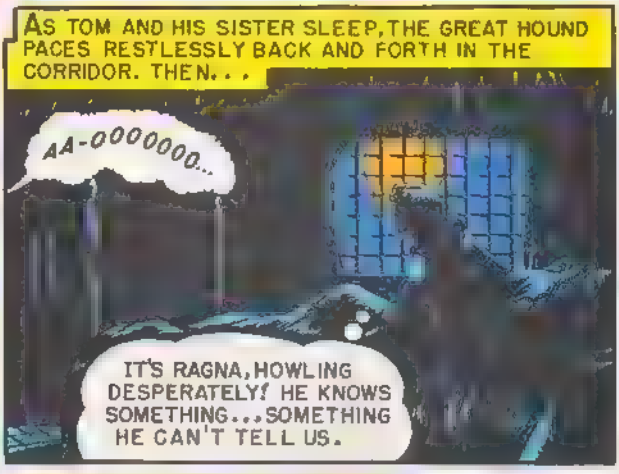


OUR OWN DESTRUCTION! TOM— WHAT DID HE MEAN?
I DON'T KNOW, BETH. BUT LOOK AT RAGNA! HIS HACKLES ARE RISING, AND HE SEEMS TO SCENT SOMETHING...

GRRRRRRR...



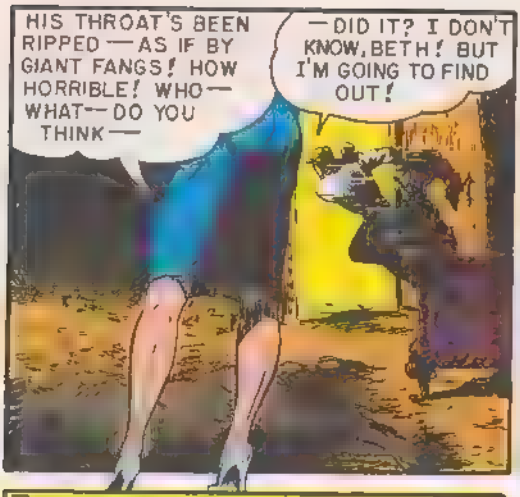
OH, TOM. I'M SCARED LET'S GO AWAY... WE DON'T HAVE TO STAY HERE!
BECAUSE OF A SUPERSTITIOUS OLD MAN — AND BECAUSE RAGNA PROBABLY SMELLS A CAT? NONSENSE! LET'S TURN IN — AFTER A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP, YOU'LL FEEL BETTER!



AS TOM AND HIS SISTER SLEEP, THE GREAT HOUND PACES RESTLESSLY BACK AND FORTH IN THE CORRIDOR. THEN...
AA-OOOOOOO...
IT'S RAGNA, HOWLING DESPERATELY! HE KNOWS SOMETHING... SOMETHING HE CAN'T TELL US.

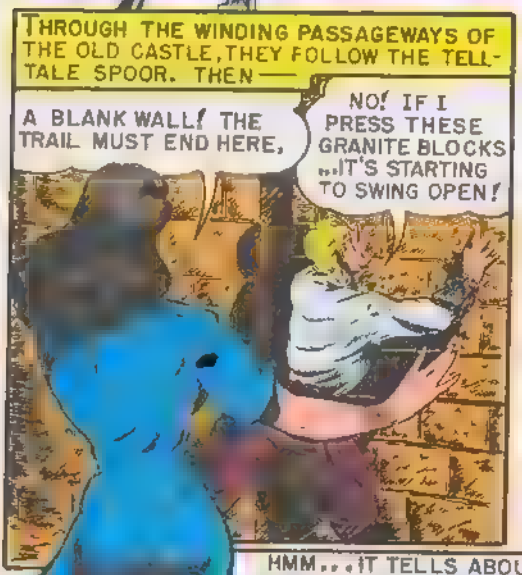
THERE! HE'S STOPPED BAYING! NOW I CAN SLEEP AGAIN.

BUT, WHEN MORNING COMES...
BETH! BETH, COME HERE. IT'S RAGNA — HE'S BEEN KILLED!



HIS THROAT'S BEEN RIPPED — AS IF BY GIANT FANGS! HOW HORRIBLE! WHO— WHAT— DO YOU THINK —
— DID IT? I DON'T KNOW, BETH! BUT I'M GOING TO FIND OUT!

THERE'S A TRAIL OF BLOOD THAT LEADS DOWN THE CORRIDOR! I'M GOING TO FOLLOW IT... AND YOU'D BETTER COME WITH ME, BETH. YOU'LL BE SAFER!



THROUGH THE WINDING PASSAGEWAYS OF THE OLD CASTLE, THEY FOLLOW THE TELL-TALE SPOOR. THEN — A BLANK WALL! THE TRAIL MUST END HERE.
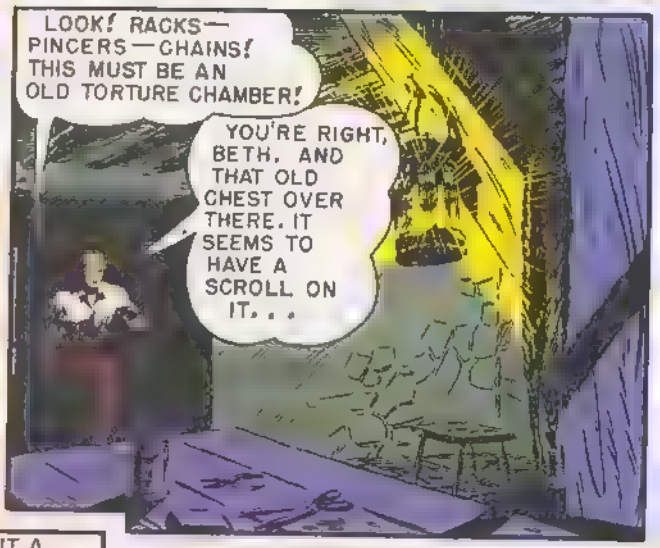
NO! IF I PRESS THESE GRANITE BLOCKS ...IT'S STARTING TO SWING OPEN!



LOOK! RACKS— PINCERS — CHAINS! THIS MUST BE AN OLD TORTURE CHAMBER!
YOU'RE RIGHT, BETH. AND THAT OLD CHEST OVER THERE. IT SEEMS TO HAVE A SCROLL ON IT...

HMM... IT TELLS ABOUT A WEREWOLF!.. A WEREWOLF THAT TERRIFIED THE CASTLE TWO HUNDRED YEARS AGO — AND WAS SLAIN IN THIS ROOM, BY LORD JOSHUA BRADY! BEFORE HE DIED, IT SAYS, THE MONSTER PLACED A CURSE...

...TO FALL ON THE SEVENTH MALE DESCENDANT OF LORD JOSHUA BRADY!
THE SEVENTH MALE DESCENDANT! BUT TOM — THAT'S YOU! THE CURSE HAS BEEN PLACED ON YOU!!

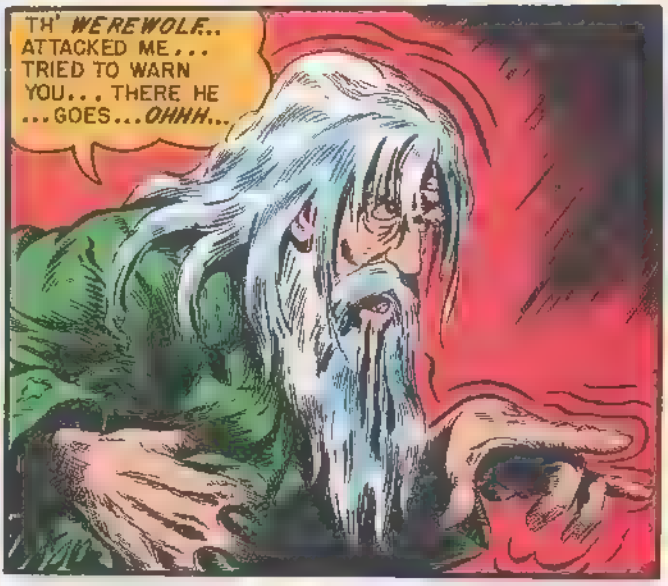
SUDDENLY...
HELP! HELP! AAAGGGGHHHH.
THAT SOUNDS LIKE MARLEY! HE'S IN TROUBLE ... COME ON, BETH!!

THE CRIES CAME FROM UP HERE! BUT THEY'VE DIED AWAY ALREADY. LET'S PRAY WE'RE IN TIME...

HE'S BEEN TERRIBLY MANGLED... JUST LIKE POOR RAGNA!
MARLEY! WHAT HAPPENED TO YOU, MAN?



TH' WEREWOLF... ATTACKED ME... TRIED TO WARN YOU... THERE HE ...GOES...OHHH...

HE POINTED TOWARD— LOOK, TOM! DISAPPEARING INTO THAT SECRET ENTRANCE. IT'S — —THE WEREWOLF!

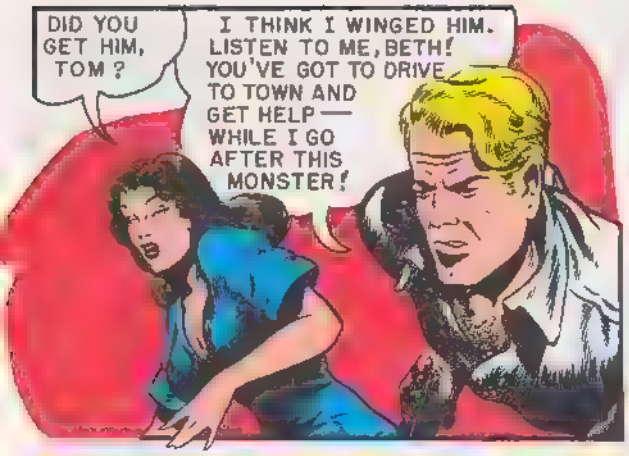
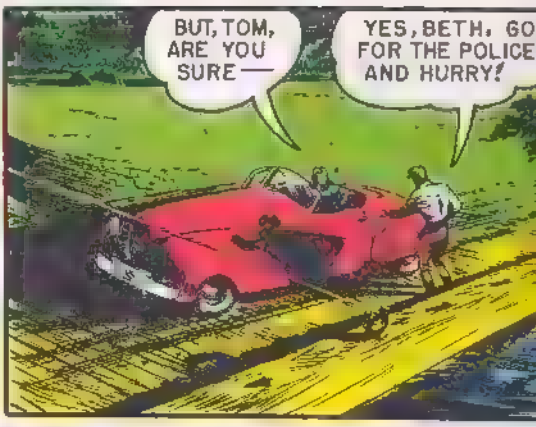
GOT TO... HIT HIM!

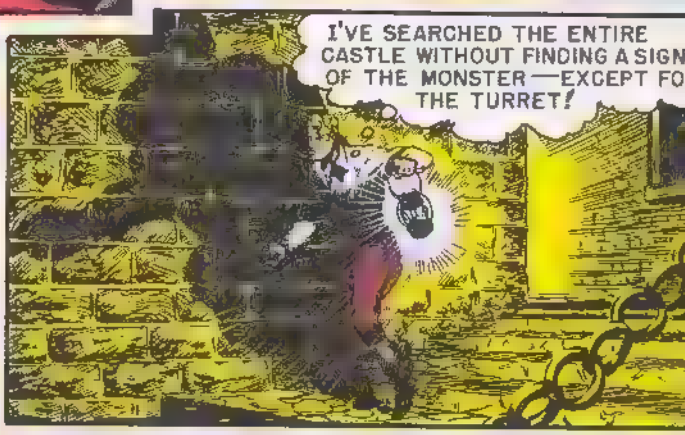


DID YOU GET HIM, TOM ?
I THINK I WINGED HIM. LISTEN TO ME, BETH! YOU'VE GOT TO DRIVE TO TOWN AND GET HELP — WHILE I GO AFTER THIS MONSTER!



BUT, TOM, ARE YOU SURE —
YES, BETH. GO FOR THE POLICE AND HURRY!

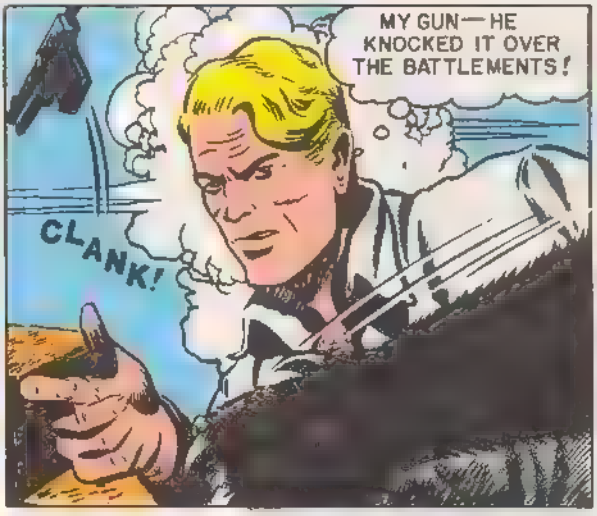
AS THE GIRL'S CAR RACES AWAY, TOM BRADY GRIMLY TURNS BACK TO THE CASTLE...
HEAR ME, WEREWOLF, WHEREVER YOU ARE! THIS IS THE SEVENTH DESCENDANT OF LORD JOSHUA BRADY TALKING.. AND I'M COMING TO GET YOU!!



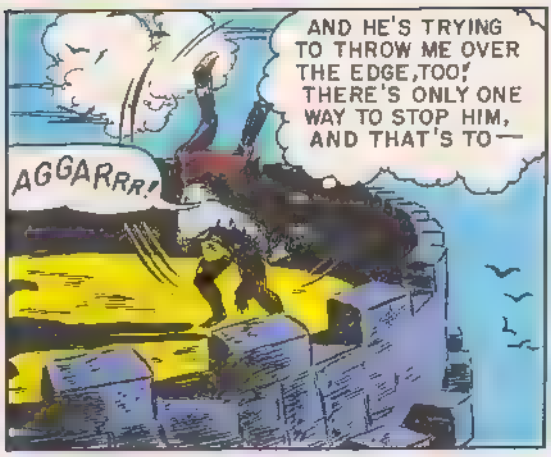
I'VE SEARCHED THE ENTIRE CASTLE WITHOUT FINDING A SIGN OF THE MONSTER — EXCEPT FO THE TURRET!

NO — HE'S NOT UP HERE. I'VE DRAWN ANOTHER BLANK...

BUT, AS THE YOUNG HEIR TURNS TO GO DOWN THE NARROW STAIRS, HE IS MET BY A TERRIFYING SIGHT!!
THE WEREWOLF! HE FOLLOWED ME UP THE STAIRS — AND CUT ME OFF!!



MY GUN—HE KNOCKED IT OVER THE BATTLEMENTS!
CLANK!



AND HE'S TRYING TO THROW ME OVER THE EDGE,TOO! THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY TO STOP HIM, AND THAT'S TO—AGGARRR!

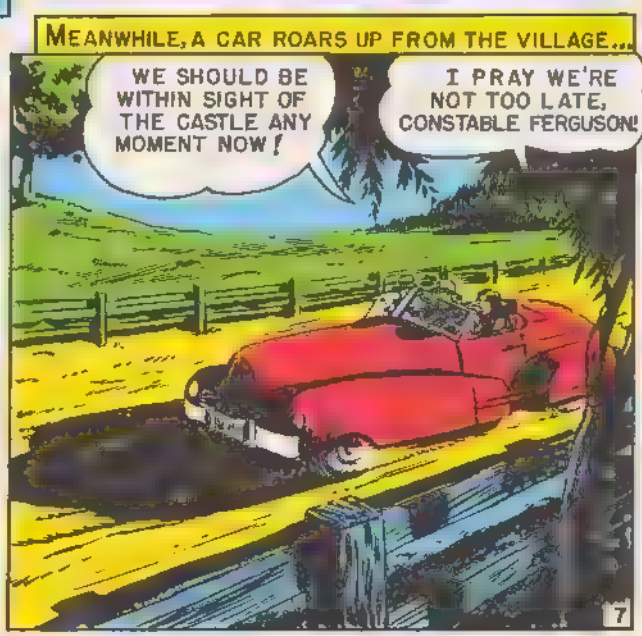
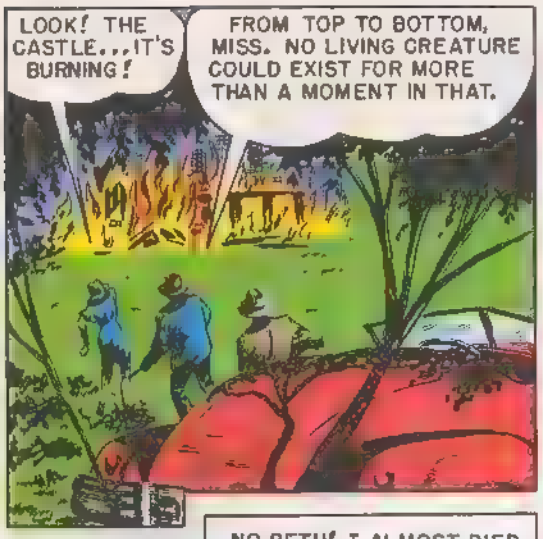
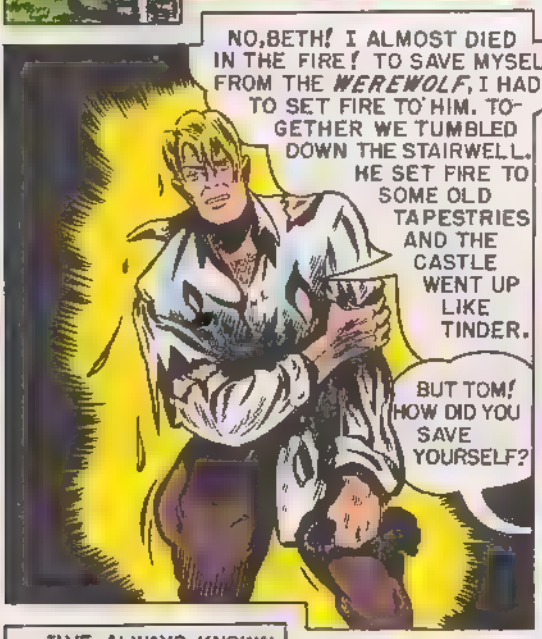
—SPILL KEROSENE FROM THE LANTERN ON HIS BACK...

...AND TO LIGHT THE KEROSENE!!
AAIIEEEEEEE!

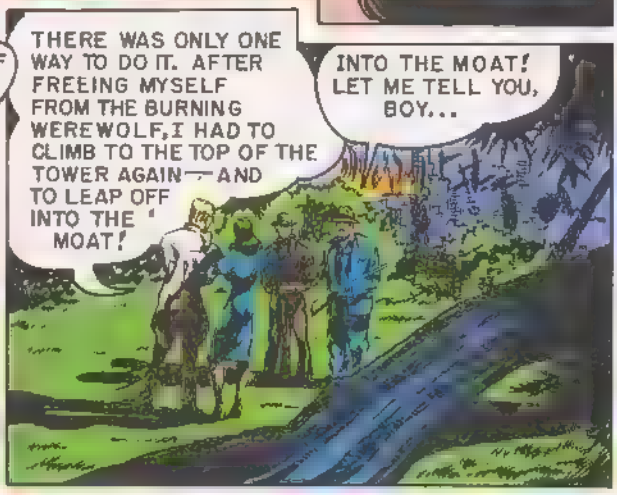


MEANWHILE, A CAR ROARS UP FROM THE VILLAGE...
WE SHOULD BE WITHIN SIGHT OF THE CASTLE ANY MOMENT NOW!
I PRAY WE'RE NOT TOO LATE, CONSTABLE FERGUSON!

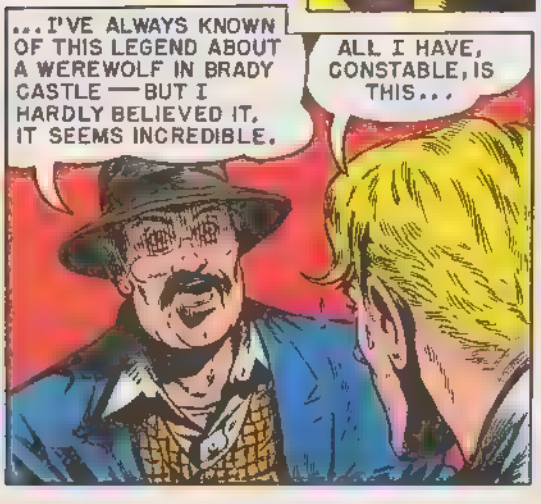




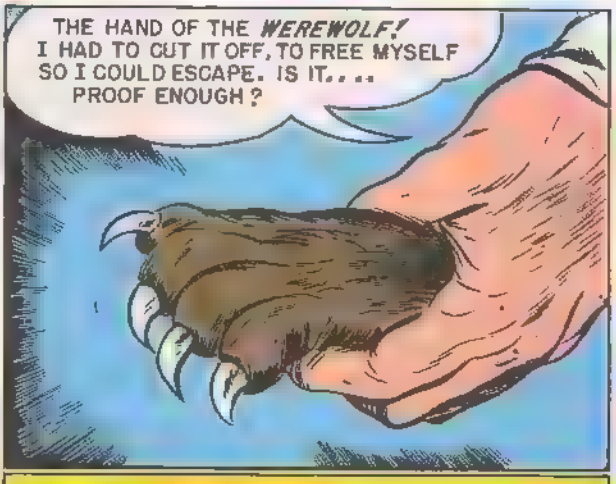
NO, BETH! I ALMOST DIED IN THE FIRE! TO SAVE MYSELF FROM THE WEREWOLF, I HAD TO SET FIRE TO HIM. TOGETHER WE TUMBLED DOWN THE STAIRWELL. HE SET FIRE TO SOME OLD TAPESTRIES AND THE CASTLE WENT UP LIKE TINDER.
BUT TOM! HOW DID YOU SAVE YOURSELF?



THERE WAS ONLY ONE WAY TO DO IT. AFTER FREEING MYSELF FROM THE BURNING WEREWOLF, I HAD TO CLIMB TO THE TOP OF THE TOWER AGAIN — AND TO LEAP OFF INTO THE MOAT!
INTO THE MOAT! LET ME TELL YOU, BOY...



...I'VE ALWAYS KNOWN OF THIS LEGEND ABOUT A WEREWOLF IN BRADY CASTLE — BUT I HARDLY BELIEVED IT. IT SEEMS INCREDIBLE.
ALL I HAVE, CONSTABLE, IS THIS...



IT'S PROOF ENOUGH FOR US! PROOF OF A SPINE-TINGLING ADVENTURE IN HORROR THAT WILL LIVE FOREVER IN THE ANNALS OF THE SUPERNATURAL!

Back again for more bad guys vs badge guys, cops and robbers, outlaws fighting inlaws? Welcome to WAR AGAINST CRIME – or CRIME PATROL, whichever you're holding!

Tomb[stone] this may concern,

My favorite horror movies are TREMORS and CREEPSHOW. I truly enjoyed TREMORS for its suspense and precise comic timing.

CREEPSHOW, however, stands out as the best. Granted, it doesn't match a few HBO TFTC episodes, but the movie is definitely more scary, frightening, intelligent, suspenseful, and funny than any handful of TFTC episodes.

Creators George Romero and Stephen King (my idols!), unlike the TFTC exec. producers, took advantage of the EC aura and made smartly written original stories based on cliches that were normally used in the horror mags. [The] HBO producers [took] only the short stories' titles and [wrote] their own material.

CREEPSHOWs stories in fact, resembled many ECs. [compare] "Father's Day" to Room for One More" (HAUNT 7), "Scared to Death" (CRYPT 8) and "The Thing From the Grave" (CRYPT 6); "The Lonesome Death of Jordy Verril" to "Swamped" (HAUNT 27), "Something to Tide you Over" to "Beauty and the Beach" (SHOCK 8) and "The Lake" (VAULT 20), "The Crate" to "The Coffin" (HAUNT 16) and "Monster Maker" (HAUNT 3); and (my favorite) "They're Creeping Up on You" to "Extermination" (HAUNT 10).

Angel Reyes address unknown

Gotta agree with high marks for TREMORS, and the sequel! Best use of worms since Buddy's Bait Shop opened a lunch counter! The anonymous editor of these mags says CREEPSHOW's "The Crate" is as good as EC's best (although it hurts him to say it – I jerk his choke-collar when he does!). –CK

Dear WAR AGAINST CRIME,

I'm wondering why my issue #2 arrived after my issue #3. Page 3 of "Hank 'Two Gun' Corley" [WAC 2] shows Hank being shot, yet Jim dies. In the end, he joins his older brother before age 21.

"America's First Crime" reminds us that the wages of disloyalty are disrespect. And helps us separate the good eggs (e.g., eggs Benedict) from the bad ones (e.g., Benedict Arnold). A famous Johnny Carson-hosted Tonight Show informed us what his wife did with Arnold Palmer's eggs for luck.

In "The Case of the Savage Strongboy" [WAC 3], Willie Blake really fell for – uh, with – Elouise Waller. It's not true that jealousy won't get you anywhere: It got Willie and Elouise from the 14th story to the pavement in record time – at which time they made quite an impression! Please print address.

Dear Crime Patrol,

Re. issue #2. The moral of "A Corpse as the Back-Seat Driver!": pushy wife, pushy accelerator pedal, pushy fuck, pushy-up daisies.

Did EC catch any political heat for having the heroes of "The Fable of the Flying Dutchman", Igor and Tanya, be Russian? Or was this before McCarthyism gained momentum? On the last page, the villainous crew asks for quarter. Although I've often heard the phrase, "Quarter was neither given nor asked", I've never really understood it. What does "quarter" mean in this context?

In "Double Crossed", Johnny Kromer sure got crossed up by Doc Mathews. At the train station, while Kromer tries to look inconspicuous in a dark trenchcoat, he draws attention with a gaudy yellow hat with a bright red band around it. It'll be awhile before he wins a Nobel Prize!

THE CHICAGORILLA

MIKE BROWN earned his nickname as the "CHICAGORILLA" way back in the days when he was only a schoolboy in the tough south-side of the Windy City. The fact that he was short and stocky, with long sinewy arms that swung almost as far as his knees, and that his bushy black hair grew low on his sloping forehead just clinched it for Mike. For, in addition to the fact that he literally resembled a Gorilla . . . Mike's chosen profession, even in those far-away days, was to strong-arm the weaker boys into paying him their hard-earned pennies for protection against any and all comers. And Mike's brain was operating along illegal channels even then . . . for the mysterious gang which Mike was supposed to defend his customers against, was very often Mike himself!

He was a smart cookie in those days, Mike very often admitted to himself with a wry grin. Had most of the kid's dough pretty well tied up . . . sooner or later it found its way into his pockets! And why, Mike asked himself, fully aware that he had the answer within his grasp? Simply because these weaklings around him were afraid of a little physical pain . . . were unable to take a good beating! And Mike knew that he was ideally constructed to take care of just such a situation! For no one could debate that Mike's appearance was ominous in the extreme . . . what with his wide shoulders and his huge bulky biceps standing out awkwardly under his ill-fitting clothing. And those eyes of his just about clinched it . . . those fierce black pin-holes were the strongest features in a face about which the boys around him often whispered: "I'd sure hate to meet up with Mike Brown in a dark alley . . . even when he's in a good mood!" And Mike, realizing intuitively that the very fact that he was ugly was the source of all the dread with which he was viewed . . . was able to capitalize on his schoolmate's fear of him.

When school-days were behind Mike Brown he looked over the employment situation in Chicago . . . and decided that nothing attractive was available for a man of his distinctive talents. So he took to hanging around one of the pool parlors in a disreputable section of the city. And it was there that he ran into FINGERS MORLEY, one of the mid-west's largest operators in bootlegged liquor. Fingers gave the bulky Mike just one glance, and offered him a job within his rather extensive organization. He told Mike that he had a vacancy for a bright young lad who had no fear of using his fists . . . and that sort of situation was right up Mike's alley, being the logical continuation of the apprenticeship Mike had served as strong-arm guy in school!

Mike's job consisted of collecting from the various dives and speakeasies which bought FINGERS MORLEY'S liquor . . . and routine as the job might have sounded, it had its moments! For it seems that Morley's salesmen had developed the habit of sending out larger shipments than had been ordered by their customers . . . and Mike's job was to convince these customers that it was to their best interests to pay for the liquor they received, regardless of the rates charged and the expanded size of the orders. After he was forced to deliver several messy beatings to reluctant customers, the word got around the underworld that Mike Brown was not a citizen to be trifled with . . . and so his work became a rather boring routine.

After six months with FINGERS MORLEY'S gang, Mike began to chafe under the inactivity which was caused by the fear his name and appearance generated among his customers. He looked about him and was rather befuddled to learn that many of the sleek young thugs in Morley's inner circle were making considerably more money than he was . . . and he could take a dozen of them at one time! This apparent injustice rankled in Mike's huge breast . . . he decided then and there that he would have to strike out for himself, in a line of work which would more equitably reward him for his unique natural talents. But what to do? He couldn't hope to muscle in on FINGERS MORLEY'S well-outlined territory . . . he didn't have the organizational brains to set up a bootlegging outfit like those that divided up the racket into home territories! What then could he do that would be built out of the fact that he was one of Chicago's most feared strong-arm men! He thought about that problem through several sleepless nights . . . and for several uneasy, brooding days. And then the answer came to him . . . it had been so obvious that he had missed it, so anxious had he been to look far-afield. He would go back to the business which had enriched him as a mere school-boy . . . a business which he would streamline and adapt to the peculiarities of adult life, of course!

And so began the next phase of Mike Brown's development as a thug of wide-disrepute in Chicago's underworld . . . the phase of his life for which he was nicknamed the "CHICAGORILLA"!

He was able to lure several of FINGERS MORLEY'S strong-arm guys away from the big bootlegger . . . some by his promises of greater compensation for their peculiar type of work, others merely by threats of what would happen to them if they dared disobey an order rasped out in Mike's gravelly voice. When his gang assembled for the first time, Mike outlined the type of work he had in mind: small shop owners and store proprietors were to be their rightful prey. Their business was to sell insurance or "protection" to the small guys in Chicago's society. In exchange for a weekly or monthly retainer paid to one of Mike's salesmen, a shop owner became relatively certain that his glass-windows would not be smashed in, his merchandise despoiled or stolen, his cash-register looted by armed thugs, his customers waylaid and beaten if they attempted to enter the store in question. More and more of the small shopkeepers began to see the advisability of buying Mike's protection . . . simply because they had no alternative. It was either to grudgingly pay the blackmail . . . or risk having their small business destroyed, and possibly having their families mauled or annihilated!

Even this profitable enterprise began to bore Mike after a while, and he determined to expand his operations so as to include some of the larger shops and businesses. His ultimate goal, of course, was to have every enterprise in Chicago and the surrounding area paying protection money to him . . . a situation similar to that of a conquering general forcing a captured city to pay him ransom for the privilege of being left unharmed!

And that was how Mike Brown ran into more than he could chew off . . . for soon he was stepping on the toes of the bigger Chicago mobsters, who owned many of the businesses which Mike threatened! It became almost open warfare between the organized bootleggers and gamblers on one side . . . and Mike's Chicago Gorillas on the other. And the situation threatened to engulf the biggest city of the middle-west, until an unforeseen event occurred one night in mid-winter.

Bored by his position as directing but physically-inactive Field Marshal, Mike decided to go on a customer-recruiting tour himself. And what did he walk into but a store which was a front for FINGERS MORLEY'S mob! While he was patiently explaining the virtues of the service he offered, the word flashed back to Morley's headquarters that Mike Brown himself was attempting to blackmail the shop. In less time than it takes to tell, a carload of well-armed gunmen drew up in front of the store, in time to interrupt Mike's convincing sales-talk, which had progressed so far that his "customer" was begging for mercy. A burst of machinegun fire . . . and the menace which Gorilla Mike Brown had presented to the underworld, was at an end! And it wasn't much later that the District Attorney was able to slam down against the armed hoodlums for the murder, an opening which he had been probing for since he had taken office! And so Mike Brown's operations, which resulted in his own death, also led to the temporary dissolution of Chicago's underworld!

The redoubtable DR. AGON claims that not only was this his Halloween costume, but a cat chased his tail half a block! True story (from Police Files?)! –CK

In 1948, the Cold War hadn't gelled, and our society's attitude toward the Soviets was problematic. Also, note the country of these Crime Patrolmen is not 'stated.'

AND NOW, COMMENCEMENT OF A NEW DEPARTMENT IN THESE PAGES, LITTLE AUTO-BIOS FROM LONG- AND SHORT-TIME FANADDICTS, 'REAL STORIES FROM YOUR RECORDS,' WHICH I'LL CALL . . .

MY STORY

I was born the last day of August 1939, the electrifying year of the New York World's Fair and the release of THE WIZARD OF OZ and GONE WITH THE WIND one day before Hitler's army marched across Poland's border. Comic books were a major part of my growing up in Minot, North Dakota.

My mother bought me Disney and Looney Tunes comics long before I learned to read and my brother, six years my elder, was crazy about anything with aircraft. He and his friends constantly traded comics and our house always seemed to be the center of activity. WINGS, AIRBOY, BLACKHAWK, SMILIN' JACK and all the flying superheros were the order of the day. I still have a few issues of STEVE CANYON and TERRY AND THE PIRATES.

By the time I got into trading with my own friends it was mostly superheros – DC comics, a few Marvels and Fawcett's Captain Marvel. The only books I collected and wouldn't consider trading were DETECTIVE and BATMAN – but all that changed in the fall of 1951. I started junior high school, got a paper route and discovered EC Comics. This, combined with the sense that EC Comics were something very special, sent me down the road to FanAddiction.

I loved the art work, especially anything by Wally Wood or Jack Davis. I still spend a lot of time paging through my hardcover editions just studying drawing styles. I have, over the years, come to appreciate all the regular EC artists although oddly enough now find Wood's work somewhat disturbing. He seemed to have trouble with visual planes and perspective. His figures often seem to be tilted or floating off the ground. At any rate, I would be hard pressed to pick out a favorite artist now.

As my collection and fascination with it grew so did my mother's distate for it. She had read magazine articles by O. K. Armstrong and those of his ilk, blaming the perceived increase in juvenile delinquency on comic books and she was genuinely concerned for my well-being. Like many others, she never read the stories and couldn't appreciate the fact that many of them were morality based 'Preachies.' She was also worried that my younger sister would be affected by them and so I began to keep them stored out of sight.

By the time the U.S. Senate hearings and the Comic Code Authority drove EC to its demise I think she had pretty much forgotten about them, but in 1958, while I was in the service, my sister got into my collection which I had stored in the attic. This, I suspect, was the first time mom had seen any of Johnny Craig's more gruesome covers and as a result all but the Civil War issue of TFT and a few copies of VALOR and PIRACY ended up in the furnace.

Over the years, although I did acquire a few books on comic book history, my reading interests turned to history and science fiction and fantasy novels. Probably a natural extension of the path EC had set me on.

I am making regular trips to comic book stores and have restored my collection and then some. I am absolutely delighted with the current 32-page reprint series. I still experience, at age 60, the same wonderful anticipation and thrill at seeing each new issue on the rack that I did as a teenager. Each reading is a fantastic trip into the past – a virtual fountain of youth.

After my father's death in 1986, while cleaning out the attic of my parent's house, I came across a box in which my mother, God rest her soul, had placed mementos of my youth. There among various drawings, report cards, awards and my baby book she had saved, in it's original envelope, my membership certificate to The National EC FanAddict Club.

I'm 50 years old and never read the original EC comics. I wasn't even aware of ECs until the early 1970s, when I bought the East Coast Comix reprints. I subscribed to every title of the EC LIBRARY in the mid to late 1970s. Although I loved the larger art of the LIBRARIES, I yearned for regular sized, full-color reprints. I bought the Gladstone reprints when they came out and I bought [Cochran's] larger format 12 issue EC CLASSICS.

I was thrilled when Cochran first started the current EC reprints – it was the next best thing to owning the originals. Although I'm mainly a fan of the EC science fiction comics, I bought every reprint issue to support your reprint project. Although I dislike horror and violence, I like having all the reprints to give myself a better feel for the original EC days.

I love the story and art in the EC science fiction comics. Most of the art and most of the story still remains among my favorite comics, even after the almost 50 years since they first appeared. Even the occasional turkey (the main ones were the Adam and Eve type yarns that were moldy oldies even when the originals first saw print) is still far better than most science fiction that has ever seen comic book form.

The EC comics, in additional to the reading pleasure they give me, have led me to search out the works of my favorite artists – Wally Wood, Al Williamson, Jack Kamen, Frank Frazetta, and others. The stories by Al Feldstein, Harvey Kurtzman, and adaptations of science fiction stories by Ray Bradbury still give me pleasure.

Thank you for the pleasure this reprint series has given to me. I love having the standard sized comics to hold and read – but I also love the large size art of the EC LIBRARIES.
